San Francisco, To take on Swedish music streaming giant Spotify, Amazon has acquired podcast publisher Wondery, one of the last major independent podcast networks, for an undisclosed sum. An earlier Wall Street

Journal report suggested that Wondery's value was at least $300 million.

According to Amazon, the deal is yet to be finalised and nothing is changing for the listeners. Wondery would be part of Amazon Music, which launched podcast support in September.

"Amazon Music launched podcasts in September 2020, and together with Wondery, we hope to accelerate the growth and evolution of podcasts by bringing creators, hosts, and immersive experiences to even more listeners across the globe, just as we do with music," Amazon said in a statement late on Wednesday. Wondery is an innovative podcast publisher with a track record of creating and producing top-rated podcasts that entertain and educate listeners, including "Dirty John," "Dr. Death," "Business Wars," and "The Shrink Next Door."

With Amazon Music, Wondery will be able to "provide even more highquality, innovative content and continue their mission of bringing a world of entertainment and knowledge to their audiences, wherever they listen". The company aims to expand Amazon Music beyond offering music.

"Our focus on high-quality audio with the Amazon Music HD tier, and our recent partnership with Twitch to bring live streaming into the app, make Amazon Music a premiere destination for creators," the company further said.

Wondery CEO Hernan Lopez will step down and leave the company when the deal is finalised and COO Jen Sargent will take over, according to media reports.

China's Zhong Shanshan replaces Mukesh Ambani as Asia's richest

New Delhi.

Zhong Shanshan, founder of bottled water company Nongfu Spring has overtaken Reliance Industries Chairman Mukesh Ambani as the richest person in Asia, with a net worth of $77.8 billion

The Bloomberg Billionaires Index showed that Zhong's net worth has surged $70.9 billion making him the richest man in Asian above both Mukesh Ambani and China's Jack

It has been one the fastest growth in wealth. Two major factors behind the surge in his wealth are the mega listings of his vaccine manufacturing company Beijing Wantai Biological Pharmacy Enterprise Co in April followed by that of his bottled water company Nongfu on the stock markets.

Nongfu Spring, the maker of bottled water, turned out to be one of Hong Kong's best listings and its shares have jumped 155 per cent since their debut, and the shares of the vaccine company have increased over 2,000 per cent.

Zhong has seen ups and downs in his life and things nave not always been this good. The 66-year-old has tried his fortune in several spheres and has even worked as a journalist, a construction worker, a beverage sales agent before getting on with his own business.

count of 65 per cent on their

New Delhi,

Oakridge Energy, one of the leading solar power company in the country, has signed up with Kendriya Vidyalaya and Delhi government for solarizing schools in Delhi. The company has recently solarized over 15 of the largest schools of the Department of Education in Delhi this year.

With the largest portfolio of projects under execution and maintenance in Delhi, the company has ag-gressively undertaken this initiative of solarization of government schools and colleges under the state government's Solar Policy introduced in 2016.

Installation of Solar plants at these institutions will not only enable them to become more energy independent, but will also result in substantial savings in electricity bills and generate an additional income through the sale of surplus power to the utilities.

Under this scheme, Delhi government schools will not be required to make any investment, with the developer making all the investment. Schools would purchase the power at Rs 3.13/kWh, which is a dis-electricity bill. For any surplus power generated, the utilities (BSES and NDPL) would pay Rs 5.65/kWh for surplus power

The project is developed by Oakridge Energy and subsidized by the Central government's capital subsidy scheme for government buildings, which Delhi government has utilized for solarizing its schools.

The utilities (BSES and NDPL) would provide netmetering, and the solar power so generated would count towards their renewable power obligations (as defined by the regulatory commission).

Oakridge's CEO Shravan Sampath, said: "We are pleased to be working on solarizing schools in the National Capital. Our goal is to solarize 1,000 schools and educational institutions by 2022, thereby providing schools access to clean and green solar energy, while also providing them reduced electricity bills in a post Covid phase when they are looking for cost savings.
